TRYING WILL DO ANYTHING IN THE WORLD

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY. Beyond the Gate. By Arthur W. Peach.

Before the Gate that fronts the vale We name Eternity Shall end the nurriad roads of Earth And pathways of the Sea. There, when the Warden asks, all me Shall lay their treasures down, The hearded trinkets of the years

The coin, the rabe, the crown. And all that we shall bear beyond

The Gate and guards thereof is not the gold, the garb nor crown. But love—and only love! —Sent in by Joyful Star.

When one uses a wire clothesine it is often difficult to wipe the line clean enough so that no black streaks are left on the clothing. The following plan is most excellent: Take an old musin sheet, tear lengthwise in strips about eight inches wide, pin these at intervals along the line, then hang up the washing, and there will be no dirty streaks left on the clothing when dry.
